

1. Which is the better pet: dogs or cats?

When it comes to pets, there are often two favourites, dogs and cats. Dogs are known for their loyalty, companionship and high energy, always seeking attention and playtime. They form a strong bond with their owners, providing affection and protection. Cats on the other hand, are known for being low-maintenance and independent, requiring less supervision and care. They are known for their calm demeanor, and while they may not seek constant attention, they show affection in their own way. So the question is, which makes the better pet?

2. Should pineapple be allowed on pizza?

Here's a question that sparks quite a bit of debate: does pineapple belong on pizza? Some argue that it's a unique and delicious combination, blending sweet and savory in a way that actually works. They enjoy the contrast of flavours and the unexpected twist it brings. Others, however, believe that fruit has no place on pizza, insisting that it messes with the traditional savory experience. It's a conversation that divides pizza lovers everywhere. So, at the end of the day, is pineapple an acceptable topping for pizza?

3. Is formula 1 a sport?

People often debate whether Formula 1 is truly a sport. On one hand, it demands a remarkable level of physical endurance from its drivers, who must stay in peak physical condition to endure the extreme g-forces and maintain focus throughout the race. On the other hand, many argue that the cars and the advanced technology behind them play a bigger role than the athletes themselves, leading some to question if it's more about engineering than athleticism. So, is F1 a legitimate sport?

4. Which sport is more demanding, rugby or tennis?

Rugby and tennis are both physically demanding sports, but they challenge athletes differently. Rugby involves constant physical contact, requiring strength, endurance, and teamwork. Players need to be tough and resilient, often pushing their bodies to the limit. In contrast, tennis relies heavily on speed, agility, and mental focus. It tests a player's stamina as they go through long, intense rallies. So, when it comes to physical demands, which sport is more challenging: rugby or tennis?

5. Should schools have uniforms?

The debate over school uniforms has been ongoing for years. Supporters argue that uniforms promote equality by eliminating fashion distractions, allowing students to focus on education and creating a professional atmosphere. They believe uniforms help reduce peer pressure and bullying. Critics, however, argue that uniforms suppress creativity and self-expression, suggesting students should be free to express their individuality through fashion. So, should schools implement uniforms, or allow students to dress as they wish?

6. Which is better: the book or the movie?

Many of our favorite movies are based on books, but often, the adaptation doesn't fully capture the original. Books offer depth and detail that films sometimes miss, providing a richer experience. Movies, however, bring stories to life with visuals, sound, and pacing, creating an immersive experience words can't match. They make characters and scenes come alive in ways books can't. So, which is better: the book that fuels your imagination, or the movie that brings the story to life on screen?

7. Should you always tell the truth, or are some lies necessary?

We're taught that honesty is the best policy, but are there times when lying might be necessary? Some argue that honesty, no matter how difficult or uncomfortable, is always the right choice. Others, however, believe that certain lies can be necessary for maintaining harmony, protecting someone's feelings, or avoiding unnecessary conflict. They argue that sometimes a small, well-intentioned lie can serve a greater good. So, should we always aim to tell the truth, or are some white lies acceptable to protect others?

8. Which is harder: climbing a mountain or running a marathon?

Climbing a mountain and running a marathon are both intense physical challenges, but they test the body in different ways. Climbing requires strength, endurance, and the ability to handle extreme conditions like altitude, cold weather, and rough terrain. It's a test of both physical power and mental toughness. Running a marathon, on the other hand, demands cardiovascular endurance and the mental toughness to push through pain and exhaustion over long distances. So, which is more demanding: scaling a mountain or running a marathon?

9. Is it better to live in the city or the countryside?

When it comes to choosing where to live, the decision often depends on the lifestyle each environment offers. City living provides convenience, excitement, and career opportunities, but it can also be stressful with noise, crowds, and a fast pace. The countryside, in contrast, offers peace, space, and a slower pace of life, though it lacks the amenities and social scene of the city. So, which do you prefer—the fast-paced energy of city life or the tranquility of the countryside?

10. Is it better to be an early bird or a night owl?

When it comes to being productive, everyone has their own time of day when they feel most focused and energized. Some people love the peaceful quiet of early mornings, using the calm to get a head start and feel productive. Others thrive at night, when everything is quieter, and they can concentrate deeply without distractions. Whether it's the fresh start of a new day or the stillness of the night, each time has its own unique appeal. So, are you someone who feels most energized at the crack of dawn, or do you get your best ideas late at night?

11. Would you rather have the ability to fly or be invisible?

Have you ever wondered what it would be like to have a superpower? Imagine being able to fly, soaring above the world, feeling the wind rush as you explore the sky. The freedom to go anywhere and see the world from a new perspective would be incredible. Or imagine being invisible, experiencing everything around you without anyone noticing. You could move undetected, observe the world from the shadows, and gather information without detection. Both powers offer amazing advantages, so, which would you choose: flying or invisibility?

12. Should you always choose adventure or relaxation on vacation?

People go on vacation for many reasons. Some crave an action-packed trip filled with adventure, eager to explore new places, try exciting activities, and experience the thrill of discovery. Others, however, prefer a peaceful getaway to relax, recharge, and escape the stresses of daily life. Whether it's the excitement of adventure or the calm of relaxation, each type of vacation offers something special. So, which do you think is better: an adventure vacation or a relaxing retreat?

13. Are penalty shootouts a good way to decide the winner?

Penalty shootouts are often used to decide the outcome of football games when the score is tied. Some argue they're a fair test of skill, precision, and nerves, adding excitement and intensity to the game. The pressure of the moment creates a spectacle, with players having to perform under extreme tension. Others, however, feel that penalty shootouts are too reliant on luck and don't reflect the overall performance of the teams. So, are penalty shootouts a fair way to determine a winner, or is there a better solution to decide a tied match?

14. Do footballers get paid too much?

Footballers are some of the highest paid athletes in the world, with salaries reaching millions each year. While many argue that their income is justified due to the revenue they generate through broadcasting deals, merchandise, and ticket sales, others believe their pay is unfair compared to other important professions like teaching or healthcare. These jobs, while crucial to society, often receive much lower compensation. So, do footballers get paid too much, or are their salaries a reflection of the business of sports and entertainment?

15. Which is better, Barry's or Lyons tea?

When it comes to tea in Ireland, the debate often comes down to two iconic brands: Barry's and Lyons. Barry's fans argue that their tea is stronger and more flavorful, making it the perfect choice for a comforting, delicious cup. On the other hand, Lyons enthusiasts swear by its smooth, balanced taste that's perfect for any time of the day, whether it's morning or night. Both brands have their own unique appeal, gaining them popularity, but which is truly the superior choice: Barry's or Lyons?

16. What season do you prefer, winter or summer?

Winter and summer both have their own unique charm, but which is truly better? Winter brings cozy nights by the fire, festive holidays, and the magic of snowfall, while summer offers long, sunny days, outdoor adventures, and the chance to relax on a beach. Winter lovers enjoy the cold, crisp air and the cozy atmosphere, while summer enthusiasts look forward to warm nights, barbecues, and endless days outdoors. So, which do you think is the better season: the frosty winter or warm summer?

17. Are cold drinks or hot drinks superior?

When choosing the perfect drink, temperature makes all the difference. Hot drinks, like tea, coffee, and hot chocolate, offer comfort, warmth, and relaxation, especially in colder months. They're great for cozy moments or unwinding after a busy day. Cold drinks, on the other hand, provide refreshment, energy, and relief during hot weather. Iced tea, smoothies, and chilled coffee are perfect for staying hydrated. So, which do you prefer: hot drinks or cold beverages?

18. Which shop is your go to, ALDI or LIDL?

Lidl and Aldi are both popular discount supermarkets known for their great deals, but which is superior? Lidl is renowned for its fresh bakery items, wide variety of European products, and high-quality selection. Aldi, on the other hand, is praised for its efficiency and even lower prices, creating a shopping process which is both quick and simple. Some shoppers prefer Aldi's streamlined layout, while others enjoy Lidl's broader product range. So, which is your go to store: Lidl or Aldi?

19. Is AI art as valuable as human-created art?

AI art has gained popularity for its ability to create stunning visuals quickly, offering a new approach to creativity. Supporters praise its efficiency, innovation, and potential to push artistic boundaries. Others argue that true art comes from the human experience, emotion, and skill, which machines can't replicate. While AI art has its merits, many believe that human created art holds deeper meaning. So, which do you think holds more value: art created by AI or by human hands?

20. Should same sex schools exist or should all be converted to co-ed?

Supporters of same sex schools argue that separating genders helps students focus and perform better, especially in subjects traditionally dominated by one gender. They believe this separation allows teachers to cater to the specific learning styles and needs of each gender. On the other hand, others argue that mixed gender education better prepares students for real world interactions, reflecting the diverse environment they'll face in both the workplace and society. So, should same sex schools continue, or should all schools be mixed gender?

21. Should private schools still exist?

The debate over private versus public schools raises important questions. Private schools often offer smaller class sizes, specialized programs, and more resources, providing students with a tailored learning experience. Supporters believe private schools offer more choice and a higher standard of education. However, critics argue that they create inequality by relying on a family's income, limiting access to quality education for many. So, should private schools continue, or should the focus be on improving public schools?

22. Should the minimum voting age be lowered to 16?

The question of whether the minimum age to vote should be lowered to 16 has sparked significant debate. Some argue that 16 year olds are mature enough to make informed decisions, as they are directly affected by political issues like education and employment. Lowering the voting age could also increase political engagement among young people. However, others believe 16 year olds lack the life experience necessary to vote responsibly. So, should the voting age be lowered to 16, or remain at 18 to ensure voters are fully prepared?
